

HOOVER, Ala. -- The Flowery Branch High football team is taking part in the National Select 7on7 Championships in Hoover, Ala., beginning on Thursday -- and Falcons fans back home can watch their team compete against some of the best teams in the nation.

For the first time, football fans all over the country can watch games live, and free of charge, on their computers at Select7on7.iHigh.com.

iHigh will simultaneously broadcast two games at a time for the duration of the championships and will include 53 games from Buccaneer Stadium at Hoover High School. Schedule of games is to be determined.

"We are very excited to be broadcasting this nationally touted event for our iHigh network and the rest of the country," said Kevin Sander, Regional Representative, iHigh.com "The level of talent at this tournament is like no other and the ability to showcase that talent online is just another way to integrate high school sports into the internet world."

The National Select 7on7, now in its eighth year, has become the largest and one of the most prestigious 7on7 tournaments in the nation. The event is held at the famed Hoover High School, the No. 1 ranked prep football program in the U.S. as calculated by fan and Web data.

Tournaments such as this feature seven offensive backs taking on a mixture of seven defensive backs and linebackers in pass-only situations.
